

Invasions and Transformations

Tuesday, 15th September, 2009.

St Antony's College, The University of Oxford.

Annual meeting of the European Association for Environmental History
UK Branch, with the European Society for Environmental History.

PROGRAMME.

10.00-10.30 David Moon.

The Transformation of the Great Plains of the USA: The 'invasion' of German farmers, cultivars, weeds, and agricultural sciences from the Russian steppes.

10.30-11.00 Glenn Sandiford.

Nineteenth-Century Narratives on the Introduction of Carp In America.

11.00-11.15 Refreshments

11.15-11.45 Bernadette Hince

Invasives and natives on subantarctic islands

11.45-12.15 Karen Middleton

Renarrating a biological invasion: historical memory, local communities, and ecologists.

12.15-12.45 Simon Pooley

Scientific and Biological Invasions in South Africa's Western Cape, c.1902-45.

12.45-1.45 Lunch

1.45-2.15 William Beinart,

Costs and Benefits of Plant transfers and Bio-invasions in historical perspective: prickly pear and black wattle in South Africa.

2.15-2.45 Raymond Smith

Invasions of the Soil and Transformations of Meaning: UK contaminated land policy in the late 20th century.

2.45-3.15 Alina Congreve.

The invasion of the Marston Vale: multinationals, environmentalists and commuters.

3.15-3.30 Refreshments

3.30-4.00 John Locke

Invasive elements in the Huntingdon Triangle: the Medieval response to 'outrageous floods'.

4.00-4.30 Peter Brimblecombe

Evolution of an air pollution journal, 1958-2008.

4.30-4.35 David Moon.

Communications amongst UK environmental historians.

4.35-4.45 William Beinart,

Closing comment.

Attendees' queries should be directed to Simon Pooley,
simon.pooley@sant.ox.ac.uk
St. Antony's College, 62 Woodstock Road, Oxford OX2 6JF