

The Personal and the Global.

EAEH 2004

14th May, 2004,

The Open University, Milton Keynes.

PROGRAMME.

10-00 Jan Oosthoek, University of Newcastle,

The role of oral history in environmental history.

10-30 John Sheail, Centre for Ecology and Hydrology, Monks Wood,

Oral history - reflections of a documentary historian.

11-00 Ruth Thomas-Pellicer, University of Surrey,

Theory of High- Middle- and Low-Culture: an Integral Method for the Articulation of the Green Predicament.

11-30 Break.

11-45 Horace Herring, OU,

Schumacher, Resurgence and the early anti-nuclear power movement.

12-15 Darren Crook, University of Hertfordshire,

An Argument From Silence? The Implications of Xu Xiake's Description of the Miju River (Yunnan province, China) in 1639.

12-45 Lunch.

2-00 Raymond Smith,

Afforestation in water supply catchments: the critical role of the individual.

2-30 Maeve O'Donoghue, UEA,

Nitrogen in rain from seventeenth century philosophies to twentieth century science.

3-00 Break.

3-15 John Grattan, Aberystwyth,

"A third of my parish have been swept to their tombs": the Laki fissure eruption and human illness and mortality in Britain and France, 1783-1784.

3-45 Peter Brimblecombe, UEA,

Edwardian fictions for London's doom.