

Wild Things: 'Nature' and the Social Imagination

Environmental History Conference, St Antony's College, Oxford
Friday 16th September 2011

This is an invitation to attend a one-day conference exploring cultural histories of the natural world. Panels include:

'Shooting' the Wildlife: representing nature in visual culture, including photography and film

Forests and the Political Imagination: forest histories and environmental narratives in their political and cultural contexts

Wildlife Biography: historical analyses of changing attitudes to species and their conservation

Constructing Nature: frontier natural environments re-imagined, re-interpreted and recreated

Nature and English Pasts: environmental myths, metaphors and management practices in English identity and culture

Economy and Nature: cultural dimensions of natural resource extraction, management and exchange

There is no conference fee. Lunch can be bought at St Antony's College.

If you wish to attend, and for further information including registration details and the full programme, please email Karen Middleton: middleton.karen@talk21.com or Simon Pooley: simon.pooley@sant.ox.ac.uk
